ANCESTRY OF THOMAS HALLIWELL

There are several possible christening records for our Thomas Halliwell:

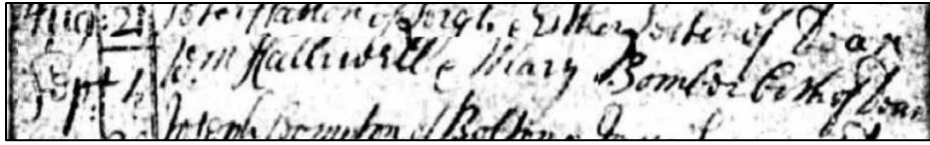

- Thomas, christened 12 March 1731 in Deane, the son of Jacob or James Halliwell of Rumworth.
- Thomas, christened 8 March 1735 in Deane, the son of William Halliwell of Over Hulton.
- Thomas, christened 11 April 1740 in Deane, the son of William Halliwell of Westhoughton.

Records on familysearch.org suggest that Thomas of 1735 died young, and was the child of William Halliwell and Maria Bomber, as was Thomas of 1740. That leaves Thomas of 1740, and Thomas of 1731 as possibilities.

Research in Deane parish records show that another Thomas Halliwell of Rumworth had children christened at the same time as our Thomas Halliwell. This is probably Thomas of 1731, and son of James Halliwell of Rumworth. That makes Thomas Halliwell of 1740, son of William Halliwell and Maria Bomber, the most likely possibility for our Thomas Halliwell. Our Thomas married Betty Marsh in Bolton. Betty was born in 1740, making both Thomas and Betty nineteen years old at the time of their marriage.

*Burial record for Elizabeth Halliwell in Deane parish:
"17 Elizabetha uxor Robti Halliwell de Rumworth"*

1729 - That year was a year of unusually high mortality in Deane. The article Dying in Drovers discusses this phenomenon: "We also know that across England the harvest of 1728 was a poor one, which may well have caused food shortages in the Bolton locality. Finally we have contemporary reports from several parts of the country of unusual levels of various infections, with doctors in 1729 noting outbreaks of 'suffocating cough', catarrh, 'inflammatory fevers' (any of which might be the result of flu), whooping cough, chicken pox and smallpox. And there's one further bit of evidence from the Deane parish register.

Alongside some of the monthly lists of burials in these years there are marginal notes written by the vicar, James Rothwell. Against June 1729 he wrote: 'Most of these dyed of agues, pluraisy, etc, tho a fever came ye first.' Agues meant chills and sweats, 'pluraisy' an inflammation of the lungs. Could this be influenza? In another note the vicar wrote that: '... in some respects ye disorder resembled ye Plague and continued amongst us above two years.'" (Dying in Drovers: History Mysteries and Parish Records)
