"Godfray Elliot & Eliza: Bamforth - 29"*

Elizabeth was most likely the daughter of Richard Bamforth and Elizabeth Kirkbee of St. Mary's, Nottingham.

The Ellotts must have been impacted by the English Civil War of the 1640s. An entry in the St. Mary's parish register showed King Charles raised his standard at Nottingham castle.

On Munday August 22. 1642 King Charles set up his Standard at the Castle

Entry in the St. Mary parish register:

"On Monday August 22 1642 King Charles set up his standard at the Castle"

"It was in Nottingham on 22 August 1642, that Charles I raised his royal standard as a signal for his supporters to rally to his side. Taking place on Derry Mount (later named Standard Hill) just outside Nottingham Castle, the event effectively marked the beginning of the Civil War. Nottingham proved to be a town of divided loyalties and Charles soon moved off to Shrewsbury to gather more support for his cause. This left the Parliamentarians (Roundheads) free to garrison the castle with their own soldiers under the command of Colonel John Hutchinson." (English Civil War, nottinghamshire.co.uk)
