Allnutt family tree from The Families of Allnutt & Allnatt, by Arthur H. Noble

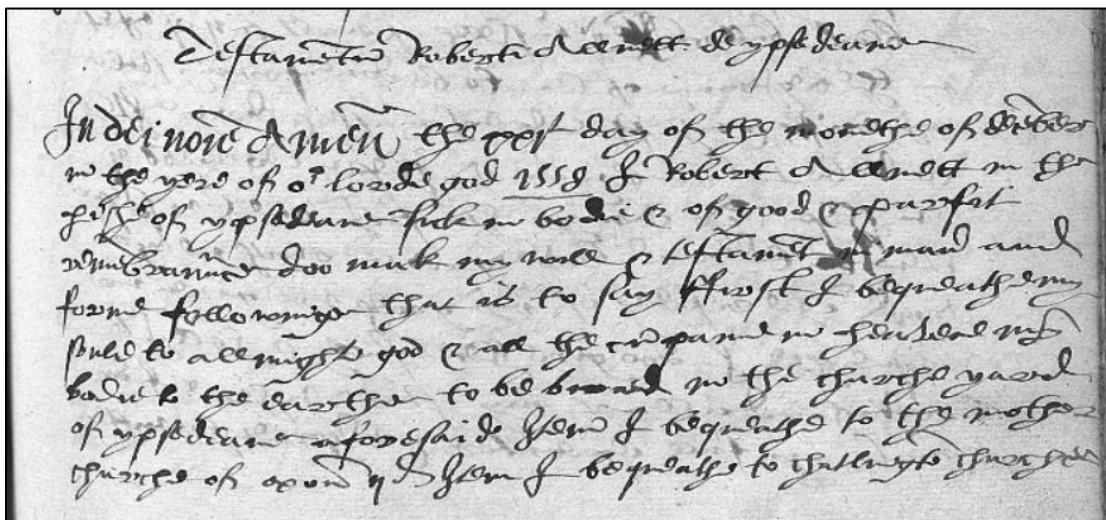

Earlier Allnuts in Ipsden:

"The name ALLNUTT (in its early forms) is one of the oldest English surnames. It appears first as a Saxon personal name in the forms AElnod, Alnot, Ailnot, Ailnoth, etc. of men who were landholders in the south of England. By the 13th century the name had become established as a surname to which a Christian name was prefixed. It is a fair assumption that these were the ancestors of the families of whom there are definite and consecutive records from the 16th century.

Two main families can be recognised from the end of the 16th century. One held land at Ibstone, Buckinghamshire, and the other at Ipsden and Northstoke, Oxfordshire. These families are traced back to prosperous yeomen, born the latter decades of the 16th century. But these were not the only Allnutt families (Allnutt is here used in a collective sense to include the name in its various spellings). They are found in other parts of Buckinghamshire - Chesham, Amersham, Hughenden and around High Wycombe. Another group of families was at Thame, Towersey and in villages between Thame and Aylesbury. A few had settled in London by 1600 and were engaged in trade: in the latter part of the 18th century the number had increased and in the 19th century a large number of

The earliest record of the Ipsden family is a will of Robert Allnett of Ypsdeane who died in 1559. The surname is also spelt Allnott and Allnot in the will. He mentions only one son - Richard - to whom he left the residue of his property. To his daughters, not named, he left an angel noble (value 6/8d. to ten shillings) each and to each of their children four pence; to every godchild who came to his burial four pence. He bequeathed a bushel of wheat to the churches of Ypsdeane, Nettlebed, Northstoke and Nuffield and to the mother church of Oxon twopence. To his gostly father, Hugh Gough, he willed twenty pence.

The son, Richard, could have been the father of Edward Alnott of Ipsden. From here there is a gap until 1641 when Edward Alnott died, making a will preserved in the Oxford Archdeaconery Records." (The Families of Allnutt & Allnatt, by Arthur H. Noble)

The Alnet family were mentioned in early wills in Ipsden:

- Will of Henry Lydall of Ipsden, 1569: "I gyve and bequeth to my cosine Edwarde Allnott one ewe sheepe." The gift of a sheep was often given to a child in early wills. Could this be our Edward Alnet, born before 1569?
- Will of Isabelle Stedman widow of Ipsden 1546: "And I do make Robert Allnot suprivisor of this my last wyll."
